

PAVEL LITVIAKOV

IR & Business Development Director, co-founder of DeNet

Pavel graduated from the Moscow State Institute of International Relations (MGIMO), specializing in Management.

He started his career in the Ministry of Economic Development of Russia where he worked as Russia's representative to the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN). He worked in Europe at Hammonds where he had an extensive experience of managing consulting projects abroad.

For 12 years he worked at Russia's and transnational corporations. His track record involves a successful building of a supply chain of petrochemicals to Pirelli and Neft Trade facilities in Europe. Pavel organized "from scratch" an oil product export scheme working at Wembley Chemicals, a UK-based company.

For the last couple of years, Pavel is involved in IT-projects with a focus on automated management, marketing and customer experience, as well as e-trading platforms. He has a number of publications relating IT start-ups.

He is passionate about hang gliding (third grade), motocross and travelling on motorbike. Married, three children.

Pavel is 100 per cent confident in the success of DeNet project which brings together investors and strategic partners.

"I have got used to working closely with other members of a team as you may always find some support when you need it, with people completing perfectly each other. Working in a team is the most comfortable and efficient form of implementing a project. IT-industry is full of «uncharted waters» and blue oceans, various businesses. IT is a big space for those who are willing to get inspired by new solutions and innovations. Our mission is to "evolutionize" the world market of storing and computing and find a new approach to resource usage".